Vacuum, Alarm, Intercom, Smart Wiring

If selected then brand and size will be detailed in Letter Of Offer

With a ducted vacuum system the dirt and dust travel to the central power unit located away from your living area (Usually in the garage) where the unit can be exhausted to the atmosphere this prevents recirculation of any dust particles and helps eliminate the "Sick Building Syndrome".

Asthma and Hay Fever sufferers no longer have to leave the house while vacuuming is being done and sleeping babies are not disturbed as all noise is eliminated from the area being cleaned. Dust Mites are completely removed from your home and the noise reduction features incorporated into the modern ducted system have to be heard to be believed!

So what exactly is structured cabling and smart wiring?

The Hills Home Hub delivers and distributes data, phone, video, audio and TV signals using the latest in data and TV cables from a centrally located enclosure to specially configured wall outlets in any room of your choice. Structured cabling using the Hills Home Hub is preferably planned at the same time as your electrical wiring. The central enclosure is home to the devices that enable the delivery and distribution of these signals. It also houses the security system central controller. An ideal location for the central enclosure is a garage or utility room.

Future planning to which rooms you would like to access data, phone, video ect should be considered, as the use of a room could change over time from a nursery to a study.
